100 YEARS OF WEDDING DRESSES was inspired by the rich history of Edgewater Hall. When I first began working for Edgewater, I used to imagine all of the brides who walked through these doors to be wed over the past 140 years. Thus, I decided to blend together Edgewater Hall's rich history with that of the history of wedding gowns to bring you 14 different wedding looks that are both traditional and nontraditional.

We partnered up with four different bridal and vintage boutiques, Monkey Girlz Boutique, Everything Goes Clothing, Hey Viv!, and Bossina Couture, all located on Staten Island in order to showcase some of the local shops and designers. We also partnered up with Noelle Kraft Photography, who is located in the Poconos, and local production company, Shadow and Sound.

We were fortunate to have worked with a beautiful collection of wedding dresses that range in fashion and style from modern times all the way to the 1900s. With the shooting of each dress accentuating their uniqueness and individuality of their time one couldn't help being pulled back in time as the array of dresses parade in front of the cameras. Although the dresses were per-say the "belles of the ball" much credit is to be extended to the locals in this shoot. To have had the opportunity of shooting this project at the Edgewater Hall was indeed The "Piece de Resistance" for it gave the shoot that grand, historic ambiance of yester years it needed to be successful.
